“...a ripe and dark-fruited nose with aromas of black cherry skin, dusty, dried herbs, baked earth and wilted flowers. Medium to full-bodied, the wine displays a firm, mineral essence with dusty tannins that grip the gumline. The Trine displays the rustic ability of the Walla Walla Valley, ending with drying tannins on the lingering finish.”

“...a lightly herbal scent, cedar, pine frond, and a whiff of marrow, all in the service of dark cassis fruit. It’s a big wine, but doesn’t overstep, having settled into a mid-weight briskness that feels comfortable and poised. And since it went into the bottle balanced, it’s going to cellar well.”
